Let me guess..

Since you've started internet marketing you've been pitched the cliché item "If you want to make money, you've got hours of studying, research, and practice ahead of you."

Well, I'm here to tell you they're wrong, and I'm proof. Roughly two months ago I was a very unsuccessful Internet Marketer who stumbled onto the goldmine we call social media.

It started Tumblr for easy profit. It was a nice start, but I couldn't wait for those followers to just roll around. It wasn't long before I was operating on Twitter and Instagram as well.

Less than two months later here I am with 130k followers and $30+ a day doing absolutely nothing, and rising quickly.

I'm going to teach you how to create a long-term sustainable passive income, but most importantly it will be 100% scalable.

Getting Started

Before that passive income comes rolling in we've got some work ahead of us. Before we go making money we need to get the tools which will do the heavy lifting. The bots are a bit pricey but it's a one time purchase for a lifetime asset.

Tools

- Automation software followliker or rootjazz

- CPA network (I use OGAds)

- Proxies – I would start with 10 (I purchase private proxies from Proxy-n-vpn)

- OPTIONAL: Hosting and a domain

I personally used followlikr for twitter and Instagram, and tumblingjazz for Tumblr. Both companies provide excellent support, but I prefer rootjazz products because they allow you to separate the scheduling of certain tasks independent of each account.

We will be creating 1-3 accounts per proxy, so 10 proxies only costs you $10-20 a month. It is your only recurring cost, so after you buy the software you only need to make $10 to break even which is incredibly easy.

You are basically guaranteed a return on investment.

Hosting and a domain certainly isn't necessary with the network we will be monetizing, it increases conversions and helps circumvent the Tumblr ban hammer, which you'll see later.

Account Creation

Now is the time to buckle up, we've got some work ahead of us.

Luckily we will make money with a completely niche-independent method, meaning our accounts simply need to gain followers as quickly as possible. If you think a tattoo account will attract followers, make one.

If it does great, make two more. We aren't restricted to any boundaries.

When you're looking for a niche to make a couple of accounts in, we want to look for niches that have popular accounts in them so we can follow their followers, and steal their tweets as well.

Bonus points if it's something people are passionate about, because it not only brings up personal engagement so more people will click your link, but gets followers quicker due to the increased shares as well.

Just get your hands dirty and spend a couple hours setting some accounts up.

Tips for account creation:

- Email masking/disposable emails increase sign up speed, but if the account gets banned you can't request for an appeal so it is gone forever.
- Make sure you clear your cookies and cache every time you sign up for an account
- When naming accounts, you can use capital I in replace for l in twitter and Instagram for to make it look like an original name.

Let the Robots Take Over

There isn't a secret formula for the settings of each bot. You simply have to play around with it. Start your accounts on low settings, as they gain followers and age scale them up.

I've maintained some very aggressive settings for twitter, and it's the only network I have yet to be banned from.

Scrape the followers of popular accounts in your niche to follow. I follow and unfollow roughly 500 people a day on new accounts, and scale up to 700 after a while.

I started up doing all my tweet scheduling through HootSuite, but eventually built lists for all my twitter accounts so Followliker cycles through the same tweets continually. List building takes time but it takes the whole method from slight maintenance to completely autopilot.

Instagram is dangerous. They are a ban happy network, and just two days ago tightened policies on all accounts.

Start very low on following and liking pictures. As for account creation it would be well worth your money to purchase 30 phone verified accounts from an online seller.

This takes a lot of hassle and risk away from yourself for a relatively cheap price.

Luckily you'll most likely run into temporary bans instead of permanent, so you have room to learn. I've avoided auto commenting but I've heard good things from it as well.

I wouldn't abstain from giving it a shot, but be careful.

The Tumblr logo, consisting of the word "tumblr." in a white, lowercase, sans-serif font on a dark blue rectangular background.

Tumblr is by far the most strict social networks I've been involved with. I have to keep my blogs following only 120 a day, and liking about 300 posts a day. I still get a proxy lifted from me sometimes, which is extremely frustrating.

However, Tumblr actually seems to bring me the best conversion rate. It might be a pain but it's definitely worth it.

The accounts grow slower but activity is certainly improved. Oh, and stay away from NSFW on Tumblr. It's like 90% of accounts.

Now Time For The Fun Part

We've got the blood, sweat and tears behind us, ready to make some money?

First, thing we'll need is a special kind of CPA network. I use a mobile pay per install network called OGAds because of the insanely high conversion rate.

PPI works by sending you money every time you get someone to install an app, I currently have an overall 36% conversion rate, which means over 1/3 of the users that see the page will download an app!

If you're still using surveys you're a couple years late to the race. When was the last time you've seen a survey content locker which didn't scream spam?

I've got a very good relationship with my content manager, so when you sign up under the above link you'll get the same manager as me.

Once you're accepted he will email you with an extensive list of landing pages that that convert really well. Just reply with the site you want made and he will create it for you, and give you your own subdomain off the site.

You don't need to lift a finger to have multiple high converting, generic landing pages that bring money.

One last trick to make you some extra money, remember when I said you'll need a domain? Here is where it comes into play.

If you really want to boost conversions you can create a WordPress news reporting site, where you can include a post which gives your site authority and trust.

I won't get into detail on this. However, not only will it increase conversions, but it will stop you from getting the Tumblr ban hammer.

You wouldn't be sharing a PPI site, you're sharing a news site. It's very powerful.

Conclusion

The most important thing to keep in mind is that everything is scalable. $30-$40 a month may be nice, but I can sit back and watch my followers grow with my earnings.

Better yet I can take action and double the number of accounts. This is a simple method to generate a sustainable 5-6 figure passive income, what are you waiting for?

There are several people making thousands of dollars a day from social media and OGAds, it isn't something to be underestimated.

This might not be the immediate money you were looking for, but it's just foolish to leave this source of income untapped.
